

HOPEFUL CHILDREN

Annual Convention of the International Kindergarten Union To-day.

Disciples of the Great German Philosopher Froebel Will Discuss Their Methods

BOSTON AND ST. LOUIS'S SUCCESS.

Use of the System Resulted as Favorably as Its Introducers Expected. Speakers and Their Subjects at To-day's Meeting.

The International Kindergarten Union will hold its annual convention to-day at the Teachers' College, West One Hundred and Twentieth street and Morning-side Heights. The convention will bring together the bright men and women in the country who are disciples of the great German philosopher, Frederick Froebel. The whole life of Froebel was given to the study of children. He was to the children of the German village in which he lived what Rip Van Winkle was to the toils in the little village of the Catskills. In 1840 he conceived the idea that the early education of the child was of greater importance than its later training.

He believed that the child's imagination should be developed before it was taught letters; that it should know color and form before it was taught to read, and be taught some of the practical sides of life by being told of the uses of different articles. His system was also founded on the old English expression that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

While teaching the little ones the different colors and telling them stories about the work going on in the world he introduced a system of games illustrating the work of later life, so that the child's day was spent to listening to stories, making articles in modelers' clay, sewing pictures on parchment, and applying the knowledge to the games they played in the open air. It was not until after his death, in 1882, that the results of his system were first apparent. Then it was found that the first year's training as he had directed it enabled the pupils who had been instructed by his method to outstrip other scholars in the primary schools.

THE SYSTEM IN FRANCE. In 1855 the Baroness Barenholtz-Bulow introduced the system in France. From France it spread to Boston, and after the Civil War became a part of the public school system of that city. In the seventies it was carried West by Susan E. Blow, a wealthy teacher, succeeded in having it introduced in the school system of that city. The work started by Miss Blow was carried on by Mary T. McCullough, Cynthia Lord and other Western women interested in education.

To-day the old German theory of enlarging the imagination of the child by the use of the school system of Boston and St. Louis. The advocates of the plan point to the fact that the work of the scholars in these cities as exhibited at the Chicago World's Fair enabled them to carry off the main prizes, and declare it is due to the kindergarten training that they received before it is instructed in the primary grade. The programme for to-day's meeting is as follows:

Opening address by Walter L. Horvey, of the Teachers' College; "Child Study in the Kindergarten," Anna B. Bryan and Amalie Heller, of Chicago; "The Kindergarten in Its Relation to Social Reform," Rev. J. L. Williams, of New York, and Mary T. McCullough, of St. Louis; "The Art of Story Telling," Miss Norah S. Spence, of Glasgow; "Elements of Culture in the Kindergarten," Hamilton W. Mable, of New York, and "The Kindergarten and the Schools," James L. Hughes, of New York, and Mrs. W. N. Hallman, of Washington, D. C.

A DISINFECTING STEAMER.

Health Officer Proposes to Use the Ripple for That Purpose.

To avoid the delay incident to the transfer of passengers from arriving vessels at Quarantine, Health Officer Doty has decided to fit up the side-wheel steamer Ripple with a disinfecting plant. Hereafter all passengers exposed to contagious or infectious diseases on board ship were removed to Hoffman Island for observation and disinfection. The Ripple will be anchored off the Quarantine station and the work of disinfection performed on board of her in much quicker time. The steamer, which was acquired at the time of the late war, and is now in the State, is 125 feet long and 25 feet beam. The cost of fitting up the Ripple is estimated at $5,000. A bill providing for this work has been introduced in the Senate and Assembly at Albany.

The City Commissioners have promised to pay the sum of $100,000 to the company for the completion of the line and to relieve the company from further requirements of its high service district.

FRIENDLY TO BIG TRUSTS.

Republican Legislators in New Jersey Will Not Act Against the Coal Combination.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 14.—New Jersey Republican Assembly have plainly showed their attitude toward trusts, and particularly their friendliness to the coal combination. They have not only refused to act on either of two resolutions that were introduced early in the week, but censured on them and decided that they were too strong for the Legislature of a State that was giving legal shelter to the big trusts in the country.

Mr. Block, the independent Republican from Passaic, tried to call up his anti-trust resolution yesterday, but Speaker De Rouse would not recognize him. The House then turned and the Republicans went into caucus. Block, although a Republican, was not allowed to go into the caucus. The caucus decided not to act on the anti-trust resolutions.

The resolutions that were the particular thorn in the side of the Republican majority were introduced by Mr. Block and James Hogan, two of the few Republicans who are of anti-monopolistic tendencies. The resolutions offered by Mr. Hogan were for an investigation of the coal-trusts. Mr. Block's resolution was practically the same as Mr. Hogan's. There is no chance for either of them to be adopted.

Ludwig Schuster, the husband of the woman, left his wife in good spirits in the morning. At noon, when he returned, he was surprised not to find her awaiting him. He went to her room and found her lying on the floor. He called for a doctor. He went to Dr. A. W. Benson, of No. 322 West Twenty-sixth street, who, after examining the woman, said she would not live more than an hour, as she had taken Paris green. The Schusters were in good circumstances, and the woman had no known reason for suicide.

St. Louis Will Build It for the Great Republican Gathering.

Four Ponderous Machines Wrecked Because of a Misplaced Switch.

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 14.—Four engines, valued at $10,000 each, were wrecked in the yard of the Berkshire division of the Consolidated road this morning. The great Barrington local came around the curve just below the roundhouse at a speed of twenty miles an hour. The switch at that point leading to the turntable had been left open, and the engines, baggage and two passenger cars, plunged ahead on the short stretch of track, plowing up the rails and breaking the roadbed. Engineer George Seely, of Great Barrington, who was running the train, escaped with a few bruises. The engine, a 400-horse power, was wrecked, and the baggage car was telescoped by the engine tender, but the baggage man escaped.

SHADES OF HORROR

Their Alma Mater's Birthday Remembered with Speeches and Gifts.

Marble Busts of Shakespeare, Milton and Virgil Among the Principal Gifts.

TEA SERVED IN THE LIBRARY.

Alumnae's "At Home" Was Made More Formal Than Usual—New Officers Chosen by the Philomathean Society of the College.

The Normal College had a birthday yesterday, and students and alumnae were united to do honor to their Alma Mater. The college was started in building on the southern corner of Broadway and Fourth street, over a quarter of a century ago. It was a modest institution, and occupied only a floor and a half, extending from Broadway to Lafayette place. It grew rapidly, and in September, 1873, the 800 students then in the college were transferred to the present edifice, corner of Park avenue and Sixty-eighth street.

There are now over 2,000 students, notwithstanding the efforts of the Executive Committee to diminish attendance in order to prevent overcrowding. Yesterday morning, after the usual chapel exercises were concluded, the affection of the students for their college was substantially evidenced by a number of beautiful birthday gifts from the various classes and societies. Miss Rivlet, in behalf of the academic senior class, presented marble busts of Shakespeare, Milton and Virgil.

Miss Senner, president of the Philomathean Society, gave in behalf of her society an exquisite piece of embroidery, the work of the members of the "Merchant of Venice." The Alpha Beta Gamma Society, through Miss Wood, presented a fine picture of a cathedral. A handsome man, a member of the college, presented a silver vase. The gift of the Normal senior class, while a very large silver flag, presented by Miss Elice, evidenced the appreciation of the annual tradition of the college.

GIFTS FOR THE LIBRARY. The college monthly paper, The Echo, gave a number of books to the college library, through one of its editors, Miss Mix, while Miss Hammond did the same in behalf of the College Glee Club. The speeches were all brief.

After the afternoon session an exceptionally gay appearance. The alumnae usually have a reception upon the second Friday of each month, but the annual social gathering was held on the "at home" days, they decided to make it a little more formal. Tables were set in the library, and the hall was filled with guests. The guests were Miss Helen Gray Cong, Dr. J. W. Benson, H. Arnold, Miss Duff, and Miss Emma E. Regan. Miss Northrup, the president, was unable to be present, because of illness. The guests were very numerous, and the evening was very enjoyable.

General Sessions, yesterday, on an indictment charging him with bigamy. Norton's two wives and the two clergymen who performed the marriage ceremony were present to testify. When the prisoner saw them, he weakened and offered to plead guilty to the charge. His counsel, W. S. Lavton, refused to do so, and the case went on record. Norton insisted upon going to trial, and was remanded to the Tombs.

SALOON MAN RECLAIMED.

Poughkeepsie Swept by a Great Gospel Wave, and One Thousand People Are Converted.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 14.—The one prevailing question in this city at the present time is "Have you been converted?" Since the arrival of Evangelist William E. Gell in this city about two weeks ago, 1,000 persons have been able to answer the question in the affirmative. During his stay he has preached to 40,000 people, and draws great crowds of people every night to his meetings in the State Armory.

One of those converted during the past few nights was William H. Vandave, of No. 4 Madison street. He has been in the saloon business for a long time. He is known by everybody here and his conversion is looked upon as remarkable. Mr. Gell is a young man, tall, and "full of whalebone and fiddle strings," as he expresses it. He is a college man, has studied extensively, and has written two books.

He is highly dramatic, fearless, and vivid in his descriptions. He is a powerful business man in the town, and is assisting the evangelist and on Wednesday afternoon nearly all places of business were closed in order to give the evangelist a play to attend an afternoon meeting.

Fifteen prominent people are doorkeepers, thirty business men act as standing ushers, and there are 150 honorary ushers. A choir of 200 voices furnishes the music. On Tuesday morning 184 women were married in the city. The evening the Army was again packed to the doors, and well-filled overflow meetings were held in different churches.

TO IDENTIFY CRIMINALS.

Commissioner Andrews Favors the Use of the Bertillon System by New York Department.

Police Commissioner Andrews told his colleagues at their meeting yesterday about the Bertillon system used for the identification of criminals. He recommended that the system be introduced into the New York Police Department. The system was introduced into the New York Police Department by the State Prison Board at Albany, and while there learned all about the Bertillon system.

He said in his report that the present "Rogues' Gallery" system was primitive and inefficient. He recommended that the Bertillon system be introduced into the New York Police Department. The system was introduced into the New York Police Department by the State Prison Board at Albany, and while there learned all about the Bertillon system.

The great merit of the Bertillon system, and that which is entirely wanting in any other, is the reliable standard of measurement adopted for the purpose of identification, and the ease with which this vast accumulation of records is indexed and made immediately available.

"In fact, the whole solution of the problem of identification depends almost entirely upon the adoption of reliable standards of measurements and means of classification." The Bertillon system will be much cheaper than the present one, Mr. Andrews said. He also added that it would be cheaper for the Board to have its own photographic gallery.

Justice Andrews reserved decision yesterday upon Georgiana Shady's application for an order compelling George Shady to give her counsel fee and alimony during the trial of his suit for annulment of their marriage, on the ground that at the time it was contracted she was the wife of another man.

She told Shady she was a widow when she met him in 1884, according to his complaint, and during that year they were married in Boston. Now he says that her former husband was alive at that time. He was compelled to assign all his property to her creditors, he says, on account of her cunning and extravagance. He says that until a few days ago she was named in the programme of a music hall in Chicago as "the extra attraction."

Mrs. Shady denies her husband's charges and swears she has a large fortune. John Shady, who Shady says was her first husband, was really her uncle, she declares.
